Teheran, Farvardine 10, 1308 (March 30, 1929).

SIR,

I have the honour to inform you that the Persian Government, animated by the sincere desire to bring to a conclusion at the earliest possible date the negotiations at present proceeding between the Governments of Persia and Japan for a treaty of friendship and for commercial, Customs, consular and establishment conventions, has instructed me to communicate to you the following provisions for the regulation of the relations between the two countries in accordance with the principles and practice of ordinary international law and on a basis of complete equality.

1. The treatment accorded to the diplomatic and consular representatives of Japan on Persian territory shall not in any case be inferior to the treatment accorded to the diplomatic and consular representatives of equivalent rank of the most favoured nation, subject to full reciprocity.

2. The Persian Government shall accord most-favoured-nation treatment in the matter of establishment to Japanese nationals in Persia, subject to full reciprocity.

3. The Persian Government shall accord to the commerce of Japan, subject to full reciprocity, treatment not less advantageous than that accorded to the commerce of any other foreign country.

The Customs duties imposed on the natural or manufactured products of Japan and the Japanese possessions on entry into Persia shall not be other or higher than those imposed on similar products of any other foreign origin.

These provisions shall come into force eight days after the date of the present Note, and unless the treaty and conventions above specified are put into force shall continue to have effect for one year, at the end of which time notification may be made of their termination at thirty day's notice; failing which they shall remain in force, and shall not cease to have effect until after notice of thirty days has been given.

I have the honour to be, etc.

(Signed) M. A. Farzine.

Monsieur Hioji Nihei,
Diplomatic Representative of Japan,
Teheran.
